To the Councillors of the City of Sydney.

GENTLEMEN.—The suffrages of your fellow-citizens have this day placed you in the honourable position of managing in a great degree, the affairs of this rising City, among other duties you are called upon to elect a fit and proper person as Treasurer. My public appeal of the 30th August will point out to you my desire to fill that important office, and I have not a day to inform you of my unrelinquished inclination; it is for you to say whether I am as well or better qualified than those who are in the field; but as soon as your names are gazetted, I shall take the liberty of waiting upon you for your votes and interest, in the mean time,

I am, Gentlemen, very faithfully,
Your obedient servant,
JOHN MORRIS,
Macquarie-street.

Sydney, November 1. 6194

REMOVAL.

JOHN HAMILTON, Boot and Shoe Maker, from No. 10, Hunter-street, to George-street, opposite the Barrack Gate. 6437

To the Councillors of the City of Sydney.

GENTLEMEN,—I beg to apprise you, that I intend offering myself as a Candidate for the office of Treasurer of the City. Being personally known to the most of you, I deem it unnecessary making any remarks as to my qualifications; but pledge myself, if honoured by your election, to give the strictest attention to the duties of the office.

I remain, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
EDWARD W. LORD.

A GENERAL MEETING of the Proprietors of this Institution will be held at their Rooms, Macquarie-street, on FRIDAY, the 18th instant, at half-past three o'clock, for the election of members, and general business.

T. SHADFORTH, Secretary.

November 3rd. 6304

Australian Subscription Library.

Macquarie-street, Nov. 5.

TENDERS for part of the Stonemason's Work to the above building will be received until the 18th instant, at noon, at the office of the Librarian, in Macquarie-street, where the plans and specification may be seen, between the hours of ten and eleven o'clock, A. M. 6397

MR. HUGH TAYLOR,

GENERAL AGENT, AT PARRAMATTA,

BEGS leave to inform his friends, and the public in general, that the last day for issuing summonses, at the next sitting of the Court of Requests to be held at Parramatta, is the 17th instant; therefore no time must be lost in settling their accounts with him, if they do not wish to appear before his Honour the Commissioner, on the 9th December next.

N. B. A few hundred sovereigns to be obtained in advance, at one shilling each. 6209

A CARD.

MRS. WATKINS, of Durham Cottage, Fort-street, begs to intimate that she has several vacancies, and will be happy to receive four gentlemen as permanent boarders. To families and gentlemen making a short stay in Sydney, her house will be found a desirable residence. To those requiring a private home her advertisement is particularly addressed. References of the highest respectability. 6201

DENTAL SURGERY.

MR. J. EMANUEL, SURGEON-DENTIST, begs to offer the warmest expression of his gratitude to the gentry and public of New South Wales, for the unprecedented patronage extended to him since his arrival in the colony. Many of its leading families have done him the honour to bear ample testimony to his skill, the result of many years study under the first professors of the College of Leyden, Netherlands, from whom he obtained his diploma in 1836, AS A DENTIST. He has since then rendered himself intimately conversant with the various modern improvements in the surgical and mechanical parts of his profession, in London, in Paris, and other towns of the continent. This allusion to qualifications peculiar to himself, is dictated as much by philanthropy as self-interest, Mr. Emanuel having actually derived more pecuniary advantage from the treatment of complaints resulting from unskilful and baneful attempts of unqualified practitioners, than from any natural cause.

Mr. E. may be consulted, with perfect confidence, at his residence, every day, from ten until five, where diseases arising from or incidental to the teeth and gums will be promptly and permanently remedied. His artificial teeth from one to a complete set, are admirably adapted to the purposes of mastication, articulation, and even for the embellishment of the mouth.

In conclusion, Mr. E. begs to caution his patients against the false reports circulated by interested parties, that the gold used by him in stopping decayed and securing artificial teeth will materially increase his charges.

Wyatt's Buildings, Castlereagh-street North. 6203

Mousseline de laine and Challi ditto
Prints in great variety, at very low prices
Muslin Shawls and Turnovers, a large assortment
Boys' Cloth and Velvet Caps.

And an endless variety of Goods too numerous to mention, which S. W. is fully confident on inspection will prove as cheap a lot of Goods (without puffing) as ever were offered to the inhabitants of Parramatta. 5078

CITY STORES.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.

HENRY FISHER, late of Lower George-street, begs respectfully to notify to the public and his friends, that he has this day removed from the old premises, down to his extensive warehouses, Custom-house Buildings, adjoining her Majesty's Customs, where he will continue to carry on his old trade in the Wine, Spirit, and General Merchandise; and in returning his thanks for the very liberal support he has received for the last eight years in his business, begs to assure his friends and the public in general, that no exertion shall be wanting to please his patrons, and execute every, even the smallest order, with punctuality, dispatch, and a due regard to economy.

NOTICE.

THE MONAVILLE ESTATE.

TO GENTLEMEN AT PORT PHILLIP AND CAPITALISTS GENERALLY.

POSTPONED BY ORDER OF THE MORTGAGEES.

MR. STUBBS is instructed by order of the Mortgagees of THE MONAVILLE ESTATE, PORT PHILLIP, advertised for sale, at the Mart, King-street, Monday, the 17th October, 1842, is now positively fixed for THIS DAY, the 8th November, 1842,

SALE AT TWELVE O'CLOCK.

ALL the above property, described as the MONAVILLE ESTATE, and estimated as one of the most highly prized, distinct possessions that the Colonies have to boast of.

It is situated four miles from the town of Melbourne, and claims within its own boundaries, an area of some hundred and twenty acres, of which twenty acres lately let to Dr. Martin at £300 per annum.

Terms very liberal, made known at sale.

It is much to be regretted that no graphic sketch can be given of this inimitable possession, triumphantly as it has maintained its paramount sway over other situations near Melbourne, in superiority of locality and suburban excellence.

It would have been much more gratifying to the Auctioneer to do more justice to it by a lengthened enumeration of its advantages and perfection than to be prevented by such positive instructions of early sale. 5459

To Dealers and others.

MR. ISAAC SIMMONS will sell by auction, at his Rooms, George street, two doors from Park-street, THIS DAY, the 8th instant, at eleven o'clock precisely,

Twenty-four pieces Moleskin, damaged

THE ELECTIONS OF TO-MORROW.

TO-MORROW the elected will in their turn become electors, being required by law to "assemble at noon, in the Market Building, in George-street, marked A, the doors of the same being closed against all other persons, and then and there to elect out of their own body, or from persons qualified to be Councillors, six fit and proper persons to be Aldermen of the City;" and "of the six persons so elected, three shall continue in office for six years, and the other three for three years only."

The mode in which this election is to take place is thus described by the Act:—"That before proceeding to such election, the Councillors present shall, by the majority of their voices, appoint one of their own body to preside at the said election, and two others of their own body to be Scrutineers at the same; and the person so chosen to preside shall first deposit in a box, or urn, to be provided for the purpose, a list of voting papers, signed by himself, containing the names of the persons, not more than six in number, for whom he may vote, and shall then receive from each Councillor present a similar list, signed by the Councillor presenting it, and deposit the same in the said box or urn; and at the expiration of one hour from the time when the Presiding Officer deposited his own paper, or sooner if the whole of the Councillors for the City shall sooner have delivered their papers, the Presiding Officer and Scrutineers shall examine the said lists or voting papers, and declare the names of the six persons who shall have the majority of votes to be duly elected to be Aldermen, which persons shall be the Aldermen of the City; and in the event of there being any doubt whether any one or more persons be elected, by reason of an equality of votes, the said Presiding Officer and Scrutineers, or any two of them, shall decide which of the said persons shall be elected: provided, however, that if, in any such voting paper, any Councillor shall include his own name, the same shall be struck out by the Scrutineers; and if any Councillor shall include in his list more than six names, his list or voting paper shall be set aside altogether."

Immediately after the Aldermen have been elected, "the Councillors present shall declare by the majority of their voices, or by ballot if the same be called for by any five Councillors, which of the six Aldermen so elected shall be the three to remain longest in office;" that is, for six years.

Each Alderman is to be "Alderman of the Ward in which he resides, provided no other of the six reside in the same Ward; but if two or more be resident in the same Ward, the Alderman in whose favour there is a majority of votes shall be the Alderman of the Ward wherein he resides; and in the event of an equality of votes in favour of two or more Aldermen resident in the same Ward, then the majority of the Councillors present at the election shall decide which of the persons so resident in the Ward shall be Alderman of the same, and shall in either case appoint the other Alderman or Aldermen to another or other Wards."

"On the same day, and at the same place, the Aldermen and Councillors shall subsequently proceed to the election, out of their own body, of a MAYOR;" the election to be conducted in the same manner as prescribed for the election of Aldermen, the same person still presiding: "provided only, that each person entitled to vote shall insert in his voting paper the name of one person only, and that that name shall not be his own."

The whole proceeding is here described so clearly and so circumstantially, that there can be neither doubt nor mistake; or, if there be room for any question at all, it is, whether, in the event of Aldermen being elected from citizens out of doors, it will be necessary that they should be summoned to the Council before proceeding to the election of MAYOR. It appears to us that this would be the proper course, and that, after allowing a reasonable time for the forthcoming of the Aldermen summoned, the MAYOR should be elected by the parties present, whether the summons shall have been obeyed or not.

It has afforded us the highest satisfaction and encouragement to learn, that the great majority of the Councilmen, including even those of the humbler grade, are bent on the selection of Mayor and Aldermen from citizens of respectable rank. If such prove to be the case, our confidence in the soundness of their judgment and the correctness of their taste, and our hopes for the future wisdom of their municipal administration, will have something like a rational foundation to rest upon. They are required by their charter to elect "six fit and proper persons to be Aldermen of the City." By "fit and proper," it is undoubtedly meant that they shall be men of education, of good repute, and of respectable standing in society. If unfit and improper men be chosen, especially at the outset, the office of Alderman will be degraded past redemption, and instead of commanding the deference and respect which rightfully belong to it, will be an object of ridicule and contempt. If, on the contrary, the office be conferred upon men whom all classes can recognise as "fit and proper," it will then be exalted to its legitimate position in the scale of City precedence, not only by the personal respectability of the individuals, but further, in all probability, by an act of grace from the representative of the Crown. We cannot undertake to assert, but we do most unequivocally believe, that if the Aldermen be really and truly "fit and proper persons," they will be appointed Magistrates of the City. From all that we can hear, from sources worthy of credit, we have reason to hope that in this most important step the Councilmen will do credit to their own good sense and right English feeling, by studying, not the interests of classes and parties, but the real dignity and welfare of the body corporate.

We have also been much gratified to hear the names of the gentlemen from whom the Councillors are disposed to choose their MAYOR. This Right Worshipful functionary will be a Magistrate ex officio; not only during his continuance in office, but also during the succeeding year. His rank within the City will be high, for he will, during his Mayoralty, have precedence in all municipal proceedings, and in all Magisterial Courts within the City, and next after the members of the Legislative Council on all other occasions, and at all other places, within the City. He will, moreover, be expected to exercise liberally the rites of hospitality—to entertain distinguished strangers visiting our port—and to promote every valuable institution for pious, charitable, educational, literary, and scientific purposes. It is of peculiar importance that the first occupant of the civic chair should be a gentleman in every way qualified to fill it with dignity and grace. He should have a salary of not less than from £300 to £500 a-year; and even the largest of these sums would be far from sufficient to cover his official and personal expenses.

Immediately after the election of Mayor, we presume the Council will proceed to choose a Town Clerk. This officer will be the right hand of the Corporation. He should therefore be a man of sound legal information, of tried ability, and distinguished for habits of patient, steady, and methodical application to business. Lacking in any of these particulars, he would soon involve the affairs of the City in disgraceful confusion. He should on no account be a party man—that is, a person who has identified himself with any exclusive section in politics. He should be one in whom all classes may place confidence. Neither should he be a man of notoriously immoral character—whether as a rake, a spendthrift, a drunkard, a gambler, a blasphemer, or an adulterer. A Town Clerk openly addicted to any of these vices, would be a disgrace to the City, and a curse to the moral interests of its rising generations. No—let our Councillors here exhibit a high tone of moral principle. Let them remember, too, that by the provisions of their charter "bankruptcy" is a disqualification for the office of Mayor, Alderman, Councillor, or Assessor. And surely it is an equally valid ground of disqualification for the office of Town Clerk: for not only would "a bankrupt Town Clerk" sound harshly and offensively in every ear, but the circumstance of his poverty would expose him to numerous strong temptations to bribery, peculation, and chicanery of all sorts. The state of his affairs should be such as to place him above such temptation—aye, above even the suspicion of his being subject to temptation.

These observations will apply with equal force to the office of City Treasurer. He will have to devote the whole of his time to his official duties. He will be not only cashier, but book-keeper to the city. He must open a numerical account with every building rated for taxation, and an alphabetical list of all rate-payers; and will thus have to open, post, and balance, about five thousand personal accounts. Hence it is essential that he should be an expert arithmetician, a thorough book-keeper, a diligent and an upright man.

The City Surveyor must be a professional man—a civil engineer, architect, and land-surveyor. He, too, ought to be above all temptation to bribery, for the private interests of individuals, especially of landlords, will often claim, and seek to purchase, his sinister consideration and preference.

The Assessors and Auditors are not to be elected until the first day of March next, the Assessors appointed by the GOVERNOR continuing in office until then.

We have thus noticed the whole of the important business which will to-morrow devolve upon our City representatives. When we next revert to the subject, may it be our pleasing duty to congratulate the Council upon the wisdom and prudence of their choice!

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SUPREME COURT.—CIVIL SIDE.

MONDAY.

WEDDERBURN v. COHEN.

FOSS AND ANOTHER v. EVANS.

TUCKER AND ANOTHER v. MUNROE.

DUNLOP AND ANOTHER v. WALFORD.

The Assessors having found a verdict for £400 9s. 9d. in favour of the plaintiff, the same was entered on the records.

MURPHY v. SHEPHERD.

This was an action of replevin brought by the plaintiff against the defendant, for an alleged illegal taking of his goods. Mr. Windeyer and Mr. Michie appeared for the plaintiff, and the Solicitor-General and Mr. Fisher for the defendant.

It appeared from the evidence, which took up the better part of the day in hearing, that the premises in question (situated at the corner of Goulburn and Elizabeth streets) had been originally the property of the defendant, that he had afterwards mortgaged the premises to a Mr. Grant, in England, and subsequently to the mortgagee; it was alleged that the equity of redemption in the property had been sold to a person named Wood, and that for some time in the early part of the present year the plaintiff had paid rent to the defendant Shepherd, as the agent of Wood. Eventually, however, the plaintiff having received notice from the agent of the mortgagee in England, (in consequence of there being an arrear of unpaid interest on the mortgage) not to pay rent for the future to any other than the mortgagee, and there being other circumstances which made it doubtful who actually was entitled to receive the rent, the plaintiff refused to pay any more rent to the defendant as agent of Wood, upon which the defendant distrained. The plaintiff denied in his pleas, in bar, that he held as tenant of Wood, and on this point a great quantity, (and some of it conflicting) evidence was given, and on his Honor putting the case to the Assessors, they found a verdict for the plaintiff, with the usual damages in replevin,—one shilling.

MARTIN v. AMNER.

This was an action of replevin, Mr. Foster and Mr. Michie, appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Windeyer for the defendant. It appeared that the defendant had seized the plaintiff's goods as a distress for rent; the plaintiff replevied and brought his action, upon which the defendant avowed that he as plaintiff's landlord had seized the goods as a distress for rent. The plaintiff denied the alleged testimony, but as it appeared that the defendant had proved a former debt for rent under the estate of the plaintiff, who lately became insolvent, and under the plan of distribution, the money had been paid on this account to the defendant. His Honor upon Mr. Windeyer's suggestion, ruled that this (the plan of distribution) was, as an admission by the plaintiff, conclusive evidence of the fact of the testimony denied by the plaintiff in his plea in bar.

For the plaintiff, it was contended that the evidence could not be conclusive against Martin, but his Honor adhered to his original ruling and the defendant therefore had a verdict.

LARNACH v. EVANS.

This was a case arising out of the affairs of Barker and Hallen. The Assessors found for the plaintiff, damages £53 4s.

BROWN AND ANOTHER v. DANGAR.

STIRLING v. ROBERTSON.

JONES v. CLARKE,

Has been postponed till to-day.

COURT OF QUARTER SESSIONS.

MONDAY.

BEFORE W. M. MANNING, Esq., Chairman, Mr. HOLLINGSWORTH, and a common Jury.

John Hogan and Mary Armstrong, who had been indicted for an assault and also for stealing from the person, having been convicted on the second count, the female prisoner was sentenced to be worked in the third class of the Female Factory for six months; Hogan was also sentenced to be worked in irons for twelve months: both the above prisoners were free by servitude.

John Perryman, a seaman, who had been committed for stealing coffee from on board his vessel, having been found guilty, was ordered to be worked for six months in the House of Correction.

Gully Mellon and Elizabeth Maingard, immigrants, were indicted for stealing a necklace, but the charge being unsupported against either of them, they were both discharged.

Mary Foley, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a piece of print, having been able to convince the Court, that this was her first offence, was sentenced to be confined in Sydney Gaol for seven days.

Mary Anne M'Mahon, an old hand, who was under committal on a charge of stealing, having been found guilty, but having shown that her previous character was as good as the majority of her class, was admonished and ordered to be confined in Sydney Gaol during fourteen days.

James Allen, indicted for stealing a mattrass, having been able to convince the Jury that he was not guilty, was discharged.

Richard Piper, who had been committed for stealing from the person; having been convicted of taking a cheque from a boy in the service of Mr. Welch, of the Atlas Printing Office, was sentenced to be transported for seven years. Previous to passing sentence, the chairman informed the prisoner that his case was one of those which proved that it was wrong to ameliorate the law as regarded such offenders, as he had been repeatedly convicted without even a symptom of redemption. The Court was sorry that it could not award a heavier sentence, as his case was one of those, which, in its opinion, deserved exemplary punishment, as he had had repeated opportunities of reforming without having done so.

After the prisoner had been removed from the dock, the Court was adjourned till to-day.

The whole list comprises about seventy cases, but of these it is not expected that more than twenty-five will be tried during the present session.

DOMESTIC INTELLIGENCE.

THE TITLED CLASSES.

ONE of the most complete, and at the same time cheap works respecting the Titled Classes of the Empire, which has been presented to the public, is "The Peerage, Baronetage, and Knightage, of Great Britain and Ireland, including the junior branches of the Nobility, and all the titled classes: by C. R. Dodd, Esq., author of the Parliamentary Companion." The grand distinction between this and other works of the same nature, is, that in one small volume, there is all the information requisite for persons unconnected with them by relationship, respecting those classes which enjoy hereditary distinction, and also respecting upwards of one thousand persons in Colonial and diplomatic services, as well as the Colonial and Scotch Bishops, the Scotch Judges, and in fact, every situation conferring a title.

Having received a copy of this useful work in our last bookseller's parcel, we have made a few extracts respecting persons in, or connected with, the colony.

NEW INSOLVENT.—Archibald Crawford, of Sydney, labourer, filed his schedule, yesterday.

THE ENGLISH POOR.—We would call the particular attention of our readers to the abstract of Lord Ashley's speech, which appears in the last page of this day's Herald. Were it not stated on such good authority, we should be loth to believe that such practices could exist in a Christian community.

PROVIDENT SOCIETIES.—A meeting will be held in the new Grammar School, Phillip-street, at seven o'clock this evening, for the purpose of receiving the report of the Committee appointed to consider the best means of forming a Provident Society upon the principles suggested by the Bishop of Australia in his lecture on that subject.

COMMON COUNCIL.—The Councillors assembled at the Police Office, yesterday, and Mr. George Allen being called to the chair, the formal acceptance of office was gone through, and the oath of allegiance administered to each individually. We have heard that the good resolutions of the former meetings were rescinded, but hope it is not true, as such fickleness would augur ill for the future conduct of the Council.

THEATRE.—The performance of the three new actresses in the musical entertainment of Paul and Virginia gives great satisfaction. The piece is altogether well played, and several duets and glees were well sung.

SALE POSTPONED.—The sale by auction at the stores of Messrs. Ogilvie and Gillett, in Pitt-street, by Mr. Samuel Lyons, has been unavoidably postponed, but will positively take place on Thursday and Friday, the 17th and 18th instant. The order to alter the advertisement came to hand too late for correction.

PERSONAL BEAUTY.—At the School of Arts, this evening, Mr. Rennie will deliver to the members a Lecture on the Skin and Complexion, comprehending eruptions, sallowness, freckles, sunburns, the effects of painting the face, wrinkles, &c.; illustrated by coloured figures of the various disorders of the skin.

THE NAVY.—A correct list of all Her Majesty's ships in commission, with their stations on the 2nd July, will be found in our fourth page.

HYDE PARK BARRACK COURT.—Yesterday there were only two cases of any public importance on the lists of this Court, both of which were against convicts for having absconded from their assigned service: in the one case a sentence of twelve months to an ironed gang was awarded, and in the other, the runaway was ordered to be worked in irons for two years.

THE FEMALE FACTORY.—Some short time since, several rumours were afloat respecting the provisions which were being supplied to the Female Factory, but nothing definite transpired, until about Friday last, when His Excellency the Governor made an unexpected visit to the establishment, and made such a close examination of the quality of the animal food, that a board of survey, including Mr. Miller of the Commissariat, have, since then, been investigating the subject.

CHARGE OF PERJURY.—The examination of Inspector Nugent upon a charge of perjury, preferred against him by a Mr. Livingstone, was resumed yesterday, when several witnesses were called for the defence, by whose evidence it appeared that the assault complained of by Mr. Nugent, had really taken place, and that the charge of perjury preferred against Nugent was an insubstantial one. Two witnesses were called, who swore positively to this point, although there was a slight discrepancy between their evidence in minor features of the case, which might easily be accounted for by the excitement of the moment; there was also some discrepancy between the evidence of one of the above witnesses, respecting what took place at the watchhouse, and the testimony of two others who were subsequently called, but this irregularity was of trivial nature. After the case on both sides had been gone through, the presiding magistrate (Mr. Brenan) said, that after a mature deliberation, he felt himself bound to dismiss it, for besides the probability that no perjury was either committed or intended, the charge would be unsustainable in a legal point of view, inasmuch as the alleged perjury had occurred in evidence, given before a single magistrate, in the investigation of an offence which he was not empowered by law to adjudicate in, and therefore such evidence, even if it did contain perjury, could not be material to the issue. His (Mr. Brenan's) opinion, however, was, that no imputation of having given false testimony could in justice be cast on either party, for in the confused state of things in the evening in question, it was very possible, that a party concerned would be unable to recollect what really did pass, with any degree of exactness, and might give an incorrect statement of occurrences under the full impression that he or she was detailing the exact truth. Although therefore, he felt it his duty to dismiss the case, he wished it clearly to be understood that he did not suppose Mr. Livingstone to have been guilty of making any wilful misstatement of facts. The circumstances of the case, as stated by the evidence of the constables, were these:—Between the evening of 25th ult. and the morning of the following day, constable Fleming, who was on duty in Castlereagh-street, heard some bad language made use of in a house kept by a Mr. Forsyth, in Castlereagh-street, and suspecting it to be a house of disorderly character, he reported the circumstance to serjeant Adams, and then to Mr. Nugent, the inspector of the district. Upon receiving this information, Mr. Nugent came to the parlour window of the house in question and listened to the conversation, which being discovered by the inmates, Mrs. Forsyth came out to close the shutters with the view of preventing the constables from listening any further; while she was speaking to Nugent, Mr. Livingstone came to the door, and after desiring her "not to talk to these men" sprang out and seized Nugent by the collar, by whom he was immediately ordered into custody and conveyed to the watchhouse upon the charge of drunkenness and assaulting a constable in the execution of his duty, which being heard before Captain Innes on the following day was dismissed on the ground that the night's confinement in the watchhouse was a sufficient punishment. It is with respect to the alleged collaring of Nugent by Mr. Livingstone, that the charge of perjury had been preferred against the former, and as stated in our Saturday's number, both Livingstone and Mrs. Forsyth swore positively that it had never occurred, while on the other hand a similarly strong proof was, as above stated, offered on the behalf of the inspector. We have already stated the result of the investigation, and we add, that in consequence of that result, a similar prosecution, which had been commenced against serjeant Adams, arising out of certain evidence which had been given relative to the same transaction, was withdrawn.

POLICE COURT BUSINESS MONDAY.—The Police lists of yesterday, were rather fuller than usual, but in consequence of the newly elected City Councillors meeting at the Police Office, the greater portion of the cases in the free list, were remanded. There were in all forty-two cases, namely, two of stealing, remanded; one of suspicion of highway robbery, also remanded; one of highway robbery, convicted; one of stealing, discharged; one of stealing, committed; one of robbery remanded; one of suspicion of stealing discharged; seven miscellaneous petty cases, of which two were dealt with, one discharged, and the remaining four remanded, and twenty cases of drunkenness in the streets, in which the defendants were for the greater part new hands. There were besides two summons cases involving charges of perjury, which were both dismissed.

A YOUNG THIEF.—A lad named James Tyrrel, who did not appear to be more than 13 or 14 years of age, was brought before the Police Bench yesterday, upon the charge of stealing six shillings and two pence, and a gold pin, the property of a female servant of Mr. Nichols, and as it was clearly proved that he had taken the property in question from the kitchen shelf, he was committed for trial.

MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE.—The following case of self destruction took place on board the cutter Industry, on her passage from Berrimagui, of which captain Wright made an affidavit at the Water Police Office, yesterday, as follows:—"On the 20th of October last, I started with the cutter Industry from Berrimagui, having on board a gentleman named C. B. Drummond, as passenger, who was placed under my especial care to take to Sydney, by order of Mr. Popham, who informed me that the deceased had previously endeavoured to make away with himself. Having observed a peculiarity in his manner, I sat up with deceased during the night; he attempted several times to get out of bed, but was prevented by me. About 10 o'clock A.M., the candle was capsized by a sudden lurch of the vessel, and I was looking for a match, when deceased jumped out of bed, ran on deck, and immediately threw himself overboard. Every possible attempt was made by myself and the men belonging to the vessel, but without effect. (Signed) R. L. Wright.

THE WEATHER.—In the neighbourhood of Sydney, the weather for the last month has been of the most tantalizing description, scarcely a day having passed in which the clouds have not gathered together, and presented a most rainy aspect, but unfortunately the hopes so many times excited, have been as often disappointed. On Thursday night and Friday morning, there were a few slight showers, and on Sunday afternoon and evening, a few more, but in the night the weather cleared up, and yesterday was a hot, dusty day. From all parts of the colony, there is a cry for rain, and in the northern districts the crop is entirely cut off. Prayers for rain were offered up in the churches on Sunday.

CANTERBURY MARKET.—We must congratulate our up-country friends at the rising value of cattle. We perceive that Mr. Polack brought to the hammer yesterday, at the above market, (among other sales) forty head of cattle, which were purchased by Mr. Cleave, at £7 12s. 6d. each. This evidently shews that a re-action is taking place in the value of stock.—Communicated.

TAKING CARE OF A FRIEND'S PROPERTY.—A man, named George Brothers, was brought before the Police Court, yesterday, upon the charge of stealing a couple of one pound notes, the property of Duncan Cameron; by whose evidence it appeared, that he fell in with the defendant at a time when he, the witness, was so far gone under the influence of the jolly god, as to render a conductor indispensable; and that the former compassionating his case, took him to a house in Clarence-street, where, after soothing him to sleep, he took the before-mentioned money from his, the witness's pocket, in order to pay himself for his trouble. In answer to this charge, the defendant at once admitted having taken the money, but added that he had done so solely with the view of keeping it in safety for his tipsy friend, who was very far from being in a condition to look after it himself. This statement was corroborated by the owner of the house where the occurrence above alluded to took place, who deposed that the defendant was a lodger of his, and had brought in the complainant, who was in a state of extreme intoxication, with the view of taking care of him. While he was there, the defendant, who observed the pockets of the drunken man to be partially hanging out, asked him, whether he (the defendant) should not take care of his money, and receiving no answer, proceeded to take out the notes, which he offered to the mistress of the house to take care of. This she declined to do, and the defendant putting the money in his own pocket, shortly afterwards went out with the complainant. Under this account of the transaction, coupled with the acknowledged drunkenness and insensibility of the complainant, who was not certain whether he had received the money afterwards or not, the Bench thought it advisable to dismiss the case.

THE EQUITY AND VICE ADMIRALTY COURTS.—These Courts will be opened to day at the usual hour, in the Court House, corner of King and Castlereagh streets.

COMMITTAL.—John Carsons, the man who stands charged with robbing Mrs. Macdermott of a reticule, on the race course, about ten weeks ago, as reported in a former number of this journal, was again brought before the court yesterday, and committed to take his trial for the offence.

NEWS FROM THE INTERIOR.

(From our various correspondents.)

M'LEAY RIVER.

A LONG, dull, and prosy article recently appeared in the Sydney Morning Herald, from one of its correspondents, showing all the bad but none of the good qualities of the noble M'Leay. What can be the motive of the writer running down this fine river, by saying it is a place exceeding any part of the globe for ague and marsh fever, and that half the people thereon are in consequence laid up with it, is best known to himself. I will admit that the ague is prevalent here during some seasons of the year, but not by any means to the extent that is erroneously represented by your correspondent: for, to say nothing of this part of the colony being exceedingly fine and healthy, I can venture to say, that there are many who have never yet been troubled with the ague at all, and those few who are occasionally affected with it here do not even comprise one-eighth, much less one-half, of its population. The writer then goes on to state, that, although the greater part of the land between the entrance of the M'Leay and Kempsey on both sides of the river, is of inexhaustible richness, yet the expense of clearing it for cultivation would be enormous, and therefore presumptuously concluded, that it may be considered unavailable in the present state of the colony. This is downright nonsense! I have seen a great deal of brush land on the banks of the M'Leay and in other countries, and I can venture to assert, without the fear of contradiction, that the timber on the former is comparatively very light to what it is on the latter, if the size of the trees are to be taken into account. I am not the only person who entertains this correct opinion, grounded as it is on facts,—I have heard many make the same just remark. The M'Leay is, in fact, any thing but heavily timbered; for the truth is, that where there is one large tree, there are twenty small ones, which almost any boy could cut down; besides, it is a notorious fact, that one acre of the very rich brush soil on banks of the M'Leay, when it is once cleared, is really worth one hundred acres of forest land elsewhere for cultivation. A great portion of the beautiful plains on the fine fertile banks of the M'Leay will, however, it is understood, be shortly so'd by the government; when it will be seen and decided who are right and who are wrong in their premises. There is one thing quite certain, that those who have a prior claim or right to a slice of this rich land, from having incurred very heavy expenses in building on and cultivating the same, upon squatting licenses, will, it is hoped, keep a sharp look out for the land jobbers, and give them a bait that they cannot easily swallow, when the land shall be sold. The M'Leay is already swarming with sea-sharks—it wants not land sharks!

In order to give the stranger some idea of the capabilities of the M'Leay, the fact need only be stated, that one of the plains thereon, known as "Doe-boy Plain" comprises upwards of four square miles; and another, called "Watt's Plain," extends three miles in length, and one in breadth. There is also a very fine large plain at Mr. Chapman's. The two former plains are occupied by Mrs. Oakes and Mrs. Salmon.

Kempsey, 20th October.—The Isabella and Lark have just arrived, and are about to return forthwith to Sydney in ballast, having been unable to procure cargoes of cedar, owing to the very great reduction in the price of that article in the Sydney market; for several of the cargoes that have recently been sold in Sydney have not actually realised sufficient to defray the expenses of freight and its cost price. Indeed, several cedar dealers have been considerable losers thereby, and have therefore since declined following any longer that unprofitable and very laborious occupation. The consequence is, that several sawyers have already been thrown out of employment, and are about to leave the river.

As for the Nambukra cedar merchants, they are determined to send no more cedar to the Sydney, but all to the London market, so long as it shall continue at a price anything under twenty shillings per one hundred feet. Some of the cargoes recently sent up realised only ten and eleven shillings per hundred feet, and that, too, all paid in property, at such prices as would reduce the timber to a value little more than the expense of freight.

Mr. Sullivan has just discovered an extensive quarry of lime-stone on the banks of the M'Leay. The quality is reckoned to be the finest ever witnessed in New South Wales. That gentleman is about to charter a vessel expressly for the purpose of sending this lime to Sydney, where it will, no doubt, meet with much competition.

The country is completely burnt up for want of rain. The most stormy weather ever known here has been experienced during the last few days. This has caused the whole of this part of the country to be set on fire, which has done some damage in several places. The wind has been so very high as even to prevent the Isabella and Lark from sailing.

October 21.—Yesterday, during the middle of the day, a fire broke out in the dockyard of Captain Gillies, on the M'Leay. For a very short period afterwards, the whole of the yard was on fire, which was spread by the high winds that had occasioned the whole bush to be in one blaze. Several turpentine trees were growing contiguous to the Captain's dwelling, which was destroyed in consequence of the sparks falling on the roof. With the exception of two buildings, every workshop and hut were burnt down. A great quantity of property was destroyed, but not so much as might have been expected. The greater part of the ships' stores and building timber, together with furniture and boats, were fortunately saved. The loss will, however, be severely felt by Captain Gillies, especially just now, as he was about to re-commence ship-building again. He had just arrived at Trial Bay, from Sydney, when the fire took place—had he been present, the loss perhaps would not have been so great. The strong winds have continued prevalent all this day. The consequence is, that the whole face of the country is in one complete blaze, threatening destruction to everything before it. Although no further damage has been heard of, yet it is feared much has been done. Everything is completely scorched up, so that scarcely a blade of grass is to be seen anywhere. Vegetation is languishing for want of rain, and to make things still worse, several white frosts have recently done much injury to the corn and potato crops. The whole atmosphere exhibits one gloomy appearance, as indeed, does almost every thing else at present on the M'Leay.

While several persons have unfortunately been great sufferers by fire on the M'Leay, during the last week, it is pleasing to find that rumour states, that fortune has been extending her hand to others who have been residents here. It is said, that she has bestowed £5000 on an Australian female, by the death of her first husband; £2000 on the cousin of an English bishop; and there is every probability that she will bestow several thousand pounds on one of our shipwrights, who has gone home for the purpose of receiving the same, which has been left to him by a person named Mellion, who was practising on the river as a surgeon, and who recently died, leaving property in America, worth nearly £ 00,000.

October 22.—A fine large vessel of nearly 200 tons burthen, was launched this day, from the dock-yard of Messrs. Newton, Ferrier, and Malcolm. She is supposed to be one of the handsomest vessels yet built on the M'Leay. The wind has at length abated, but the change has not yet brought rain.

October 25.—I have kept open this communication for three days longer, in the hope of having the gratification of communicating to you a fall of rain; but I regret that the present suffocating state of the atmosphere has not enabled me so to do. So very parched is the ground, that even the fruit trees this season are only now coming into blossom. It is therefore expected that there will be but a very scanty show of fruit here this year. When rain does come, it is prognosticated by those who profess to be judges of the weather, that it will come in torrents.

ENGLISH EXTRACTS.

THE LATE EARL OF LEICESTER.

(From the Mark Lane Express.)

THIS venerable nobleman departed this life at Longford Hall, one of his seats in Derbyshire, at half-past five o'clock in the morning of Thursday last. The account of his death reached town on Friday morning. For the last six months his lordship had been gradually sinking, from extreme age. He removed from Holkham to Longford Hall some time ago, for the benefit of the change of air, and his death was preceded by no pain.

Few men have deserved so well of their county and mankind as the late earl. For nearly seventy years he has been before the public, as a consistent politician, and the first of English agriculturists. His high honour and strict integrity, his exemplary conduct in all the relations of life were never once questioned by the most determined of his political opponents, though at one period all who shared his very decided opinions had to lay their account with a warfare not always conducted with a scrupulous regard to truth and honesty.

Thomas William Coke (the late earl) was born on the 4th of May, 1752, and consequently was in his 91st year. His father, Wenman Roberts, Esq., succeeded to his uncle the Earl of Leicester, in 1759, and assumed the name and arms of Coke. The earldom and inferior honours became then extinct. The family of Coke is of great antiquity in Norfolk, and many of them have occupied seats for that county. The celebrated Sir Edward Coke, Lord Chief Justice of England, would alone have conferred lustre on any house.

Mr. Coke succeeded his father in 1776. In 1774, he was returned for Norfolk, and, with one brief interruption, sat for that county from that time till 1832. He was called to the House of Peers, by the title of Earl of Leicester, in 1837. His lordship was twice married. His wife, whom he married in 1775, died in 1800. He married, in 1822, the third daughter of the Earl of Albermarle, and the son of this marriage, Thomas William, now Earl of Leicester, was born in 1822.

The late earl, throughout the American war, was in opposition, and he was one of the small band of Whigs who remained in opposition with Mr. Fox during the war which followed the French Revolution. At all times he was a strenuous advocate of economy, and often raised his voice in Parliament against the extravagance of the government, from which he anticipated the utmost danger to the country. He was also a zealous supporter of Parliamentary reform, and was uniformly found the foremost in the ranks of the Liberal party.

But, it is as the successful agriculturist, as the enlightened possessor of a princely estate, whose example was beneficially felt in every corner of the Island, and whose patronage could always be commanded by those who deserved it, that Thomas Wm. Coke will chiefly be known to posterity. Mr. Coke was, we believe (with the exception of the Marquis of Townsend, in the beginning of the last century), the first instance of a gentleman of large estate devoting himself heart and soul to agriculture, and commanding by his success the suffrages of the most experienced farmers. Before his time, the men who improved agricultural were generally gentlemen of comparatively small estates. In Scotland agricultural improvement originated on Tweedside and East Lothian with the second class of gentry, whose success led by degrees to the improvement of the large estates. It was reserved for Mr. Coke to show what could be done by the owner of a princely estate, who with more ample means could emulate the prudence and care imposed by necessity on men of more limited fortunes.

We owe it to Mr. Coke that agriculture became a favourable pursuit with men of rank and fortune. His success preceded the agricultural pursuits of George the Third, and the liberal patronage of Francis Duke of Bedford. The circumstances which led Mr. Coke to devote himself to agriculture are both curious and instructive. They have, fortunately for the world, been imparted by the Earl of Leicester himself to one of the most enlightened agriculturists of our times—Earl Spencer; who, in the "Journal of the Royal Agricultural Society of England," volume the third, for 1842, Part I. (published by Mr. Murray of Albermarle-street), has devoted an article to this most interesting subject. It also appears in the Farmer's Magazine for July, just published, and to which we adverted in the Mark Lane Express of the 20th ult. To this article, pregnant with instruction, we refer every reader who wishes to know all that the noblest of hearts owed to Lord Leicester.

A CURIOUS INDEX.—At a late meeting of the Institution of Civil Engineers, a paper was read by the Rev. Mr. Clutterbuck on the periodical drainage and replenishment of the subterranean reservoirs from which the wells of London and the surrounding country are supplied. The author stated the curious fact, that the weekly depression of the London wells is about five inches. It is said that unless some periodical rest were afforded the supply would altogether cease. This periodical cessation of demand occurs every Sunday. The author states that on Sunday during the cessation of pumping the original level is generally nearly resumed. As a general rule the author stated "that the holy-days of the metropolis ought to be known by the relative heights of water in the wells at some distance from it." The observations which have led to this very curious discovery were made in the neighbourhood of Colnbrook, part of which district is covered by the London and plastic clays, and where a series of observations have been made on the wells. The neighbourhood in question is supplied from the great subterranean chambers whence the deep wells of London are supplied.—London Paper.

NEW PATENT COMPOSING-MACHINE.—(From a Correspondent).—There was exhibited yesterday, at 110, Chancery-lane, one of those triumphs of mechanic genius and skill to which so many tens of thousands of industrious workmen of the present day can very truthfully point—notwithstanding all that modern philosophy may say about the benefits which such improvements have conferred upon the community at large—as the cause of their utter ruin and degradation. The machine alluded to is a new patent composing one, and will, there can be little doubt, and that at no distant period, work an entire revolution in the composing portion of the printing trade. It is the invention of Messrs. Young and Delcambre, the inventors of a somewhat similar but comparatively imperfect machine, described in the public journals about twelve months since. The machine itself has a great resemblance to a cottage piano, with the external framework removed. It has 72 channels, containing a complete fount of type, under which are placed levers in connection with keys similar to those of the piano, each key having engraved on it its character, which corresponds with the channels above, in which the different letters are placed. As the letters are moved out of the channels by the action of the player they slide through various curves on an inclined plane at the back of the machine and fall to one point, where they are received into a spout and beaten forward to a composing-stick, or, as it is called by the machinist, a justifying-box, by a very ingenious mechanical movement. This justifying-box is at the end of a receiving-spout, and the type is drawn into it in lines of the width of the page to be set up; and when the usual number of lines have been justified the box is emptied into a galley in the way that the compositor empties his composing-stick. While this "setting up" of the type, as the printers term it, but which here is in reality "letting down," is going on, the channels are being fed by two boys. The rapidity with which this machine gets through its work may be judged of from the fact that type equal to half a column of this journal was justified in a few minutes less than an hour—that is as fast as the reporter usually transcribes his notes. At this machine there are eight persons employed, three intelligent young women and five boys. The first are alternately engaged two hours each in composing, justifying, and correcting. The same system obtains with the boys, one of whom turns the wheel before spoken of, two, as has been stated, fill the channels, and two distribute the type. A clever compositor will set up 2,000 letters in an hour, but the average is about 1,500 or 1,600 letters. The young women whom we saw compose at the machine here, as they stated to us, been learning for about three months, and the average rate at which they justify, for we observed that the composer was sometimes too quick for the justifier, is about 6,000 letters per hour. With nine or twelve months' practice they will very likely be able to compose at the rate of 8,000 or 9,000 per hour. The cost of composing by this machine was stated to us to be 2d. per thousand, and from the rate at which the machine composed and the wages which we ascertained were paid to those employed, we entertain no doubt that such is the fact. The movements of the machine are exceedingly simple and beautiful, and the whole of it being composed of steel and brass, it will work for years without getting out of order. One of these machines works three sorts of type. The only objection that struck us was that the constant friction of the letters down the brass channels, after they are struck out by the action of the composer, must be injurious to the type. The machine was worked by clean dry type: what would be the effect of working with the usual letter of a morning paper?—Herald.

GENERAL REMARKS.

MONDAY, 31st.—Very gentle south easterly wind after eight, A.M.; veered due east by ten (almost calm), and P.M. east-north-east; between eleven and three o'clock, several small detached electrical cumuli or nimbi (from which thunder proceeded) passed over from south-east to north-west; three to four, calm; occasional large drops of rain from similar nimbi, and lightning; after 4, pleasant airs from west of north (thermometer, out, 77); at six o'clock, wind chopped round due south, and came on to blow heavily; increased after sunset to a fresh gale: about eight, began to moderate; night darkly clouded, and lightning in north.

TUESDAY, 1st.—Calm clear morning; after eight o'clock, pleasant easterly breezes, veering east to north-east P.M.; cloudless sky; night calm, clouded with cumuli.

WEDNESDAY, 2nd.—Calm until eight, A.M.; afterward north-easterly breezes; veered north P.M.; strong wind; atmosphere clouded, and very hazy.

THURSDAY, 3rd.—Calm, cloudy, and hazy in the morning, vane set north-north-west; about ten o'clock, light easterly airs; veered south-south-east by eleven, and afterwards a loose vaporous scud or fog was carried over with great velocity from south-south-east in a north-west to north direction; afternoon, fresh cool breezes sprung up from south-south-east; veered south by half-past one, and blew hard, P.M.; a heavy scud and nimbi flying over, with rain at times; night, wind squally and boisterous; occasional flying showers; lightning in south to south-west. Thermometer, out, at ten, A.M., 77; at eleven, 72; noon, 67.

FRIDAY, 4th.—Strong wind A.M.; gloomily overcast, and trifling rain occasionally; P.M., wind veered west of south, and gradually dropped to a calm by the evening; continued overcast.

SATURDAY, 5th.—Calm dull morning; cirrous clouds across zenith; afternoon, north-easterly breezes; veered north-north-east, and freshened; extremely hazy; a copious dew deposited at night; sky cloudless.

SUNDAY, 6th.—Light south-easterly wind A.M. Cirro-stratus extending across sky, and a low scud flying underneath from south by east; after one o'clock, became gloomily overcast from south and south-west, and after two, gentle passing showers; very light wind, calm intervals; vane most unsteady; between three and half-past three, shifted south by south-west, west, to north-west, then back to south-west, and at five, south by west; afterward a calm; and at 6·38 chopped round to north by west, gentle breezes, and veered north by east, where remained; evening, clouds dispersed; lightning in north and north-east.

[COPY OF CIRCULAR.]

To ———,

One of the Councillors of the City.

SIR,—I take the earliest opportunity of conveying to the Members of the Town Council, the intimation which I have already given through the Public Press to the Citizens, of my intention to apply immediately after the election of the Mayor and Aldermen, for the appointment, in the gift of the Council, of Treasurer to the City.

I trust the Councillors will appreciate the motives which has induced me hitherto to refrain from personally canvassing the gentlemen who were likely to become Councillors, which was simply an expectation, and (since the result of the polling has been made known), a conviction, that the Council will, in filling up so responsible and honourable a situation, be influenced by no personal regards or solicitations, but only by a consideration of the fitness of the applicant. Having had the happiness of intercourse with most of those whom I now address, in the management of business akin to the duties of the public employment to which I now aspire, I feel that any representation which I might make of my possession of the proper qualifications for the office, and my assurances which I might offer of my determination to conduct myself diligently and faithfully, would be of little moment, either to confirm or to weaken the sentiments which they have had the means of forming respecting me: and, therefore, I content myself with stating that, (in case it shall seem fit to the Council to command my services), I am sufficiently disengaged to undertake at once the preparatory arrangements necessary.

I am, Sir, your very obedient Servant

ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL.

Hunter street, Sydney, Nov. 2. 6476

To the Mayor, Aldermen, and Councillors of the City of Sydney.

GENTLEMEN,—I respectfully beg to make known my intention of becoming a candidate for the office of Corporation Architect: to those gentlemen who are acquainted with my professional abilities, I need offer no remark as to my competency; and in soliciting the support of those unacquainted with the same, I beg to refer them to the various buildings which have been erected from my designs, and under my superintendence, in and about the City.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,

THOMAS BIRD.

A. FITZPATRICK,

SURGEON DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF PARIS, AND MEMBER OF THE ACADEMY OR SCIENCES,

HAS the honour to inform the Residents of Sydney and its vicinity, that he intends to practice the Surgical and Mechanical branches of his profession, with the latest improvements introduced in this department of practice by the most eminent dentists of Paris and London.

A Fitzpatrick hopes, by scrupulous and unremitted attention to the cases confided to his care, to merit a share of public patronage. Artificial Teeth, from one to a set, fabricated upon a principle which prevents their being distinguished from the natural teeth, and which renders the extraction of the stumps unnecessary. Scaling, Stopping, and Extracting, performed daily, during consultation hours, from ten to four o'clock.

Each having a frontage to the Government Road which leads to the Township of Goulburn. These Allotments adjoin Mr. Shelley and Mr. Moses' Lands, are not far from the MULWAREE CHAIN OF PONDS, and from the quality of the land alone they are well worthy of attention. In addition to which, from their immediate vicinity to Goulburn, they must greatly increase in value, as it is most probable that in a short time they will become a part of the Town of Goulburn itself; at present, they may be compared to the SURRY HILLS of Sydney.

These farms are situated near the Horse-shoe road, opposite to the estates of David Johnstone, Esq., Captain Weston, C. Tompson, Esq., and others, being on the navigable banks of the river, where there is plenty of water for vessels of any burthen.

This property has many advantages,—such as very little fencing being required, as it is bounded on two sides by water; there is plenty of timber for every purpose that can be required on a farm. It adjoins the Government Wharf and Stonequarry, where there is plenty of FRESH water, and is only a short distance from Liverpool; it has easy water conveyance by the river to within six miles of Sydney, which is a great advantage; there is some excellent stone upon the estate suitable for building and flagging streets; a large portion of the land has been under cultivation.

4th.—EIGHT FARMS of twenty-five acres each, in the PARISH OF CASTLEREAGH.

These farms are situate on the Great Northern Road, between Penrith and Richmond, Windsor, &c., commencing at the bridge, and bounded on the south by land of J. T. Hughes, Esq.; on the north by Crown land, and near the properties of Messrs. Spencer, Cupitt, &c.; the lands of Messrs. Harper, Rope, Etsell, and Connor, are directly opposite on the other side of the Great North Road. Advantages are here presented that are rarely to be met with.

5th.—FOUR ALLOTMENTS near MIDDLE HARBOUR.

Situate at the head of a creek leading to Middle Harbour; they contain upwards of Ten Acres each, in the vicinity of the main road to Wolstonecraft's, Nichols', Gore's, and other wharves at LANE COVE, and near to the estates of Mr. D. D. Matthews, known as "Clanville," Messrs. Foster, Bradley, and others.

The accommodation of water conveyance, which is to be obtained at a short distance from these allotments, offers great advantage to the inhabitants of the district, who have thus ready communication with Sydney and other places.

6th.—TWO FARMS on the MAIN DOORAL ROAD.

Containing by deed of grant, eighty five acres; viz.:—No. 1, forty-five acres; No. 2, forty ditto, both situated on the high road, contiguous to the Estates of Messrs. Maziere O'Brien, Woodhouse, Floyd, and others.

The road from Wiseman's joins the Dooral Road, at a short distance from these Farms on the south. This property is particularly recommended to notice.

7th.—TWO PLOTS OF GROUND AT BURWOOD,

Fronting a reserved road leading to the Burwood Road, which joins the Parramatta at Neich's, and the Liverpool Road at Broad's, they are bounded on the east by Mr. Smart's land, on the west by Mr. Gommany's, and on the north by Mr. Edrop's, which is the only property between these allotments and the Parramatta Road. They are opposite Mr. Soole's, and near Mr. Webb's lands.—Contents, Three roods thirty-seven and a-half perches each. Land hereabouts is rapidly advancing in value.

They contain fifty acres each, and are bounded on the south by Mr. Coates' land, on the north by Mr. Loseby's, on the west by Mr. Foster's, and are near the Estate of W. Bowman, Esq., Oxley's Estate, and the WINGECARRIBEE RIVER, with a frontage on the high road from Argyle to Sydney. Conway and M'Kenna's Farms are immediately opposite this property.

9.—TWO ALLOTMENTS in the TOWN OF YASS, containing half an acre each, being No 16 of section 1, fronting Warambalulah-street, opposite the reserve for public recreation; in which section are the lands of Messrs. M'Dermott, Hurley, Fermall, Moses, &c., and the Police Station and Court House.

The value of these Allotments is sufficiently obvious.

10th.—EIGHT ALLOTMENTS at LANE COVE, containing one acre each.

This property is beautifully situated on the banks of Lane Cove, where there is plenty of water for vessels to lay close, and discharge or load. As it is bounded by two roads, one leading to Parramatta and the interior, and the other crossing over to the Parramatta River, there can be no doubt but this property will become very valuable, as this must be a great thoroughfare. It is also joined by several small farms, and is not more than half-a-mile from Mr. Kirk's property, and three miles distant from Sydney.

In reference to these highly valuable estates, the auctioneer will not add a single word to the above bare description. It is only necessary for intending purchasers to remember that they will be positively knocked down to the highest bidder WITHOUT THE LEAST RESERVE; and that the title of the whole of them will be found perfect, as they are all grants from the Crown, and most of them a PEPPERCORN QUIT-RENT ONLY.

Terms—25 per cent. cash deposit on the fall of the hammer, the residue by approved endorsed bills at three and six months, with security on the property if required.

ENGLISH EXTRACTS.

STATE OF THE MINING POPULATION.

ABSTRACT OF THE SPEECH OF LORD ASHLEY IN MOVING FOR LEAVE TO BRING IN A BILL FOR REGULATING THE EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN IN MINES.

IN South Staffordshire, Shropshire, Warwickshire, Leicestershire, and Cumberland, children begin to work at seven years of age; about Hallifax, Bradford, and Leeds, at six; in Derbyshire and South Durham, at five or six; in Lancashire, at five, and near Oldham as early as four; and in some small collieries of the last neighbourhood, some children are brought to work in their bed-gowns. Lord Ashley observing in passing, that had it only been the great coal-owners with whom they had to deal, the necessity for the bill would not have existed. In North Durham and Northumberland, many children are employed at five or six, but not generally; that age is common in the East of Scotland; in the West of Scotland, eight; in South Wales, four is a very usual age; in South Gloucestershire, nine or younger; in North Somersetshire, six or seven. In the South of Ireland no children at all are employed. All the under-ground work, which in the coal-mines of England, Scotland, and Wales, is done by young children, appears in Ireland to be done by young persons between the ages of thirteen and eighteen.

With respect to sex—

The practice of employing females under ground is universal in West Yorkshire and North Lancashire; it is common at Bradford and Leeds, in Lancashire, Cheshire, and South Wales; general in the East of Scotland, rare in the West; and no women are employed in Staffordshire, Shropshire, Warwickshire, Leicestershire, Derbyshire, Cumberland, Durham, Northumberland, Gloucestershire, or Somersetshire. In none of the collieries in the coal-fields of Ireland was a single instance found of a female child, or a female of any age being employed in any kind of work. "I must observe," said Lord Ashley, "that with respect to that country, neither children of tender years nor females are employed in under-ground operations. I have often admired the generosity of the Irish people, and I must say that if this is to be taken as a specimen of their barbarism, I would not exchange it for all the refinement and polish of the most civilized nations of the globe."

Lord Ashley then turned to the nature of the localities in which those labourers are employed—

The health depends much upon the ventilation and drainage of the places; and they differ according to the depth of the seams of coal, which vary from ten inches in some places to ten or twenty feet in others. In South Staffordshire for instance, says Dr. Mitchell, the coal-beds are sufficiently thick to allow abundance of room; the mines are warm and dry, and there is a supply of fresh air. The case is pretty much the same in Northumberland, Cumberland, and South Durham, with some exceptions in the last place; and in North Durham there are some thin seams. The mines are damp, and the water in them is sometimes deep, in Warwickshire and Lancashire. In Derbyshire, "Black damp very much abounds; the ventilation in general is exceedingly imperfect." "Hence fatal explosions frequently take place; the work-people are distressed by the quantity of carbonic acid gas which almost everywhere abounds, and of which they make great complaint, and that the pits are so hot as to add greatly to the fatigue of the labour. While efficient ventilation," the Report adds, "is neglected, less attention is paid to drainage. Some pits are dry and comfortable. Many are so wet that the people have to work all day over their shoes in water, at the same time that the water is constantly dripping from the roof: in other pits, instead of dripping, it constantly rains, as they term it; so that in a short time after they commence the labour of the day their clothes are drenched; and in this state, their feet also in water, they work all day. The children especially (and in general the younger the age the more painfully this unfavourable state of the place of work is felt) complain bitterly of this." It must be borne in mind that it is in this district that the regular hours of labour are not less than fourteen or sixteen a day. In the West Riding of Yorkshire, it appears that there are very few collieries where the main road exceeds a yard in height, and in some it does not exceed 26 or 28 inches; nay, in some it is even as little as 22 inches in height: so that in such places the youngest child cannot pass along without great pain, and in the most constrained posture. In East Scotland, where the side-roads do not exceed from 22 to 28 inches in height, the working places are sometimes 100 and 200 yards distant from the main road; so that females have to crawl backwards and forwards with their small carts in seams, in many cases not exceeding 22 to 28 inches in height. The whole of these places, it appears, are in a most deplorable state as to ventilation, and the drainage is quite as bad as the ventilation. The evidence of their sufferings, as given by the young people and the old colliers themselves, is absolutely hideous. In North Wales, the main-roads are low and narrow, the air foul, the places of work dusty, dark, and damp, and the ventilation most imperfect. In South Wales, in many pits, the ventilation is wholly neglected; and the Report complains of the quantity of carbonic acid gas, which produces the most injurious effects, though not actually bad enough to prevent the people from working. This, indeed, is the general result of the Report of the Commissioner for that district. With respect to the mines in Glamorganshire and Pembrokeshire, he states the ventilation to be most imperfect, and productive of a manifest tendency to shorten life, as well as to abridge the number of years of useful labour on the part of the workpeople.

The next subject is the nature of the employment in these localities—

Now, it appears that the practice prevails to a lamentable extent of making young persons and children of a tender age draw loads by means of the girdle and chain. This practice prevails generally in Shropshire, in Derbyshire, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, in Lancashire, in Cheshire, in the east of Scotland, in North and South Wales, and in South Gloucestershire. The child, it appears, has a girdle bound round its waist, to which is attached a chain, which passes under the legs, and is attached to the cart. The child is obliged to pass on all-fours, and the chain passes under what, therefore, in that posture, might be called the hind legs; and thus they have to pass through avenues not so good as a common sewer, and oftentimes as much neglected. This kind of labour they have to continue during several hours, in a temperature described as perfectly intolerable. By the testimony of the people themselves, it appears that the labour is exceedingly severe; that the girdle blisters their sides, and causes great pain. "Sir," says an old miner, "I can only say what the mothers say, it is barbarity—absolute barbarity." Robert North says—"I went into the pit at seven years of age. When I drew by the girdle and chain, the skin was broken and the blood ran down. If we said any thing, they would beat us. I have seen many draw at six. They must do it, or be beat. They cannot straighten their backs during the day. I have sometimes pulled till my hips have hurt me so that I have not known what to do with myself." In the West Riding, it appears, girls are almost universally employed as "trappers" and "hurriers," in common with boys. The girls are of all ages, from seven to twenty-one. They commonly work quite naked down to the waist, and are dressed—as far as they are dressed at all—in a loose pair of trowsers. These are seldom whole on either sex. In many of the collieries, the adult colliers, whom these girls serve, work perfectly naked. Near Huddersfield, the Sub-Commissioner examined a female child. He says—"I could not have believed that I should have found human nature so degraded. Mr. Holroyd and Mr. Brook, a surgeon, confessed, that although living within a few miles, they could not have believed that such a system of unchristian cruelty could have existed." Speaking of one of the girls, he says—"She stood shivering before me from cold. The rug that hung about her waist was as black as coal, and saturated with water, the drippings of the roof." "In a pit near New Mills," says the Sub-Commissioner, "the chain, passing high up between the legs of two girls, had worn large holes in their trousers. Any sight more disgustingly indecent or revolting can scarcely be imagined than these girls at work. No brothel can beat it." "Sir," continued Lord Ashley, "it would be impossible to enlarge upon all these points without going too far into the evidence, from which the most abundant selections might be made. I will say, however, that nothing can be more graphic and touching than the evidence of many of these poor girls. Insulted, oppressed, and even corrupted as they are, there exists oftentimes, nevertheless, a simplicity and kindness in these poor beings, which render tenfold more heartrending that system which forces away these young people from the holier and purer duties which Providence appoints for them, to put them to occupations so unsuited, so harsh, and so degraded. It appears that they drag these heavy weights some 12,000 yards, some 14,000 and some 16,000 yards daily." "In the East of Scotland," says the Commissioner, "the persons employed in coal-bearing are almost always girls and women. They carry coal on their backs on unrailed road, with burdens varying from ¾ cwt. to 3 cwt.—a cruel slaving," says the Sub-Commissioner, "revolting to humanity. I found a little girl, only six years old, carrying half a cwt., and making regularly fourteen long journeys a day. With a burden varying from one cwt. to 1½ cwt., the height ascended and the distance along the roads, added together, exceeded in each journey, the height of St. Paul's Cathedral." Thus we find a child of six years old, with a burden of at least half a cwt., going fourteen times a day a journey equal in distance to the height of St. Paul's Cathedral! The Commissioner goes on—"And it not unfrequently happens that the tugs break, and the load falls upon those females who are following; who are of course struck off the ladders. However incredible it may be, yet I have taken the evidence of fathers who have ruptured themselves by straining to lift coal on their children's backs." But, if this is bad enough for the fathers of the children, the case is still worse for pregnant women: it is horrible for them. Lord Ashley observed, that he had ever found these people most accurate in their evidence on their own condition. "I have a belt round my waist," says Betty Harris, "and a chain passing between my legs, and I go on my hands and feet. The road is very steep; and we have to hold by a rope, and where there is no rope, by any thing we can catch hold of. It is very hard work for a woman. The pit is very wet. I have seen water up to my thighs. My clothes are wet through almost all day long. I have drawn till I have had the skin off me. The belt and chain is worse when we are in the family way." "A woman has gone home," says another, "taken to her bed, been delivered of a child, and gone to work again under the week. "The oppression of coal-bearing," says E. Thompson, "is such as to injure women in after-life; and few exist whose legs are not injured, or haunches, before they are thirty years of age." "Jane Watson had two dead children; thinks it was so from the oppressive work. A vast number of women have dead children, and false births, which is worse, as they are not as able to work after the latter. I have always been obliged to work below till forced to go home to bear the bairn; and so have all the other women. We return as soon as able—never longer than ten or twelve days; many less, if they are much needed. It is only horse-work, and ruins the women; it crushes their haunches, bends their ankles, and makes them old women at forty." Another poor girl says, "We are worse off than horses; they draw on iron rails, and we on flat floors." Another witness, a most excellent old Scotchwoman, Isabel Hogg, says—"From the great sore labour, false births are frequent, and very dangerous. Collier-people suffer much more than others. You must just tell the Queen Victoria, that we are quiet, loyal subjects; women people here don't mind work, but they object to horse-work; and that she would have the blessings of all the Scotch coal-women if she would get them out of the pits and send them to other labour." "Well, Sir, and I say so too," added Lord Ashley.

The next point respects the hours of work—

"When workpeople are in full employment," says the Report, "the regular hours of work for children and young persons are rarely less than eleven; more often they are twelve; in some districts they are thirteen. In Derbyshire, children, &c., work sixteen hours out of the twenty-four, reckoning from the time they leave their home in the morning until they return to it in the evening." As regards the East of Scotland, there is "overwhelming evidence. The labour is often continued on alternate days, at least fifteen, sixteen, seventeen, and eighteen hours out of the twenty-four." Anne Hamilton, seventeen years old, says, "I have repeatedly wrought the 24 hours; and after two hours of rest and my pea-soup, have returned to the pit and worked another twelve hours." "In the great majority of these mines night-work is a part of the ordinary system of labour. The labour is generally uninterrupted by any regular time set apart for rest and refreshment; what food is taken in the pit being eaten as best it may while the labour continues. In the coal mines of Ireland a fixed time is allowed, at least for dinner.

The physical effects on the workpeople are not so visible as might be supposed until a certain time of life; though some children suffer severely from mere exhaustion—

Agnes Kew, fifteen years old, says—"It is sore crushing work; many of the lasses cry as they bring up their burdens." Again, another says—"It is sae fatiguing work, it maims the women." Mr. T. Batten, surgeon, of Coleford, says—"Has known cases of nervous relaxation in young boys. Had one case of epilepsy in a boy about thirteen, brought on by too much exertion; another boy died of hemorrhagia purpurea, from the same cause. The boy was not more than seven years of age." One phænomenon is a preternatural and unhealthy muscular development. The physical effects of this system of labour may be classed under these heads—stinted growth, crippled gait, irritation of head, back, and feet, a variety of diseases, premature old age, and death. "Several," says Dr. Scott Allison, "become crooked. Diseases of the spine are very common and very serious. Several of the girls and women so employed are distorted in the spine and pelvis, and suffer considerable difficulty at the period of parturition." Diseases of the heart are very frequent, say all the medical witnesses: many are ruptured, even lads from over exertion, some are ruptured on both sides. But the most destructive and frequent disease is asthma: some are affected at seven or eight years of age; most colliers at the age of thirty become asthmatic. Dr. Scott Allison says, that between the age of twenty and thirty, many colliers become more and more spare: "the want of proper ventilation," says an old miner, "is the chief cause; the men die off like rotten sheep." There is also another new disease, of which the House now heard perhaps for the first time—the awful melanosis or black spittle, attributed to the want of oxygen to decarbonize the blood, and by Dr. Makellar to a carbonaceous infiltration into the substance of the lung. The disease is incurable and fatal. The colliers, says Mr. Massey, Clerk to the Wellington Union, are disabled at forty; and one of the Commissioners says, that each generation of that class of the population is commonly extinct soon after fifty.

The moral effects of the system are equally alarming. It superinduces a ferocity of feeling among the men—

One boy had two of his ribs kicked out because he could not do what was beyond his strength. Jonathan Watts says—"A butty has beaten a boy with a stick till he fell. He then stamped on him till the boy could scarcely stand. The boy never told, and said he would not, for he should only be served worse. Boys are pulled up and down by the ears. I have seen them beaten till the blood has flowed out of their sides. They are often punished until they can scarcely stand." John Bostock, speaking of Derbyshire, says—"The corporals used to take the burning candlewicks, after the tallow was off, light them, and burn the arms of the children. I have known my uncle take a boy by the ears and knock his head against the wall, because his eyesight was bad, and he could not see to do his work, as well as others. Girls are beaten as severely as boys: they strike them in the face and knock them down." William Holt says—"I have seen an eye knocked out by a stone flung at them by the master." Chief-constable Oldham says, speaking of North Lancashire—"There are so many killed, that it becomes quite customary to expect such things, and people say, 'Oh, it's only a collier.' There would be more feeling exhibited if a policeman were to kill a dog in the streets. Even the colliers among themselves say so; so that when they learn which it is that is killed, that is all they think about it."

The women are rendered unfit for the duties of their sex by overwork and demoralization—

It appears that they are wholly disqualified from even learning how to discharge the duties of wife and mother. Matthew Lindley, a collier, says—"I wish the Government would expel all females from mines; they are very immoral; they are worse than the men, and use far more indecent language." George Armitage says, "Nothing can be worse." John Simpkin openly avowed the part which he had repeatedly taken in destroying the morals of the girls. Now, the corruption of the men is bad enough; but if we suffer the women to be corrupted it is perfectly obvious that we are allowing the waters to be poisoned at their very source. Indeed it appears that wherever girls are employed the immoralities are scandalous. The Reverend Richard Roberts says, "The practice of working females in mines is highly objectionable, physically, intellectually, morally, and spiritually." "It is awfully demoralizing," says Mr. Thornely, a Justice of the Peace for the county of York: "the youth of both sexes work often in a naked state." The Sub-Commissioner says, "The employment of females in this district is universally conceived to be so degrading, that all other classes of operatives refuse intermarriage with the daughters of colliers who work in the pits." Joseph Fraser, a collier, says, "The employment unfits them for the duties of a mother; the men drink hard, the poor bairns are neglected; in fine, the women follow the men, and drink hard also." "Under no conceivable circumstances," says the Sub Commissioner, "is any one sort of employment in collieries proper for females; the practice is flagrantly disgraceful to a Christian as well as to a civilized country." "I have scarcely an exception to the general reprobation of this revolting abomination." "I am decidedly of opinion," says Mr. Thornely, "that women brought up in this way lay aside all modesty, and scarcely know what it is but by name. I sincerely trust that before I die I shall have the satisfaction of seeing it prevented, and entirely done away with." "Now, I know," added Lord Ashley, "that the Commissioners have not by any means told the worst of the story. They could not, in fact, commit to print for general circulation all the facts and circumstances that had come to their knowledge in connexion with this system; but it does not require any very vigorous imagination on the part of those who have read or heard these statements to draw from them conclusions amounting to a state of things which is not only disgraceful but highly injurious to the country."

Since the first disclosures of the African slave trade there has not prevailed throughout the land such a feeling of abhorrence and disgust as this system has excited; and the feeling is shared by many well-intentioned proprietors, who are anxious to see ameliorations introduced. Much, no doubt, must be left for future legislation; but the most hideous evils can and must be immediately removed.

Such is the object of Lord Ashley's bill. Its first provision was, the total exclusion of all women from the mines and collieries of the country—

Few, he believed, had any real interest in keeping the women so employed. The motives of those who induced them to undergo the shameful toil, as described by the workpeople, were, that they do not catch cold, are more manageable, more intelligent at an early age, are content always to remain drawers without rising to be coal-getters, and work for lower wages; and Mr. Wright, the manager of Mr. Vamsay's mines, a highly intelligent and moral man, stated the disgusting reason, that women will work in bad roads where no man could be induced to draw. The advantage of excluding women was not a mere matter of speculation; Mr. Wright had had experience of that regulation in the mines under his care. He said—"Four years ago, I superintended Mr. Vamsay's mines: females and young children excluded. A vast change in the comfort and condition of the colliers who availed themselves of the new regulations. Some families left at the period, being desirous to avail themselves of the labour of their female children; many of whom have returned, and the colliers are much more regular than heretofore." This was confirmed by the evidence of Thomas Hynd, coal-hewer in Mr. Dundas's pits, who said—"When Mr. Maston first issued the order, many men and families left; but many have returned, for they find now the roads are improved, and the out-put not limited, they can earn as much money, and get homes: many of the females are gone to service, and prefer it." Mr. Wright continued—"This will force the alteration of the economy of the mines; owners will be compelled to alter their system; they will ventilate better, and make better roads, and so change the system as to enable men who now only work two days a week to discover their own interest in regularly employing themselves." All this was confirmed by the statements of an honourable friend of his, Mr. Hulton of Hulton, who had been in the possession of pits for five-and-twenty years, and had never suffered females or children of tender years to enter them. The consequence was, that the population around those pits was in a state of greater comfort, and distinguished by a better morality, than the people of other collieries. Mr. Maxton of Armiston, and Mr. Hunter, the mining oversman, state, that "in consequence of a new ventilation, and an improved mode of railing roads, a man and two boys take nearly as much money as when the family were below; and many of the daughters of miners were at a respectable service." Mr. Maxton added, that before the regulations colliers used to migrate in the proportion of one-fourth, but now not one-tenth do so.

The next provision of the bill would exclude all boys under thirteen years of age; for to allow the children to go down into the mines at all would be out of the question—

They would be entirely under the control of the miners; and subterranean inspection would be impossible, as the life of the inspector would not be safe; few of the police would even venture to pursue fugitive offenders into the mines. One of the dangers of employing young children in the mines would appear from the following extract—"With all the precautions explosions take place, and more than one hundred people have been killed at a time." And no wonder; "for all the expedients devised to secure the safety of the mines may be counteracted by allowing one single trap-door to remain open; and yet in all the coal mines the care of these trap-doors is intrusted to children of from five to seven or eight, who for the most part sit, excepting at the moment when persons pass through these doors, for twelve hours consecutively, in solitude, silence, and darkness." The children are wholly at the mercy of the colliers, who overwork them to make up for time lost in drinking, gambling, and cock-fighting.

The next important provision in his bill would be to prevent the employment of males under twenty-one years of age as engineers. The employment of children in that capacity is a fertile cause of accidents—

"The accidents which occur," says the Sub-Commissioner in the mining district of South Staffordshire, "are numerous; and to judge from the conversation which one constantly hears, we might consider the whole population as engaged in a campaign. The risk is constant and imminent. It is a life, says a collier, of great danger both for man and child: a collier is never safe after he is swung off to be let down the pit. In 1838, in fifty-five districts of registration, 349 deaths, of which 88 only were caused by explosion or suffocation, the rest through the unguarded state of the pit's mouth, the badness of the ropes, the mismanagement of the drawing-engine, and the accumulation of water in the mines." He wished particularly to draw the attention of the House to the fact that the miners were drawn up and let down in baskets moved by the steam-engine at the pit's mouth. This engine was frequently left in charge of children of twelve, eleven, and even nine years of age. Let the House hear the result of such a practice. Mr. Wild, Chief Constable of Oldham, whose duty it is to collect evidence for the Coroner's inquests, said—It is a general system here to employ mere children to tend these engines, and to stop them at the proper moment; and if they be not stopped, the two or three or four or five persons, wound up together, are thrown over the beam down into the pit again. There have been people wound over at Oldham Edge, at Werneth, at Chamber-Lane, at Robin-Hill, at Oldbottom, and on Union Ground here, within the last six or seven years. Does not know a case in which the children were not the engineers. Three or four boys were killed in this way at the Chamber-Lane Colliery, by the momentary neglect of a little boy, who he thinks, was only nine years of age; and who, he heard, had turned away from the engine when it was winding up, on his attention being attracted by a mouse on the hearth."

The fourth and last principal provision was the abolition of apprenticeship and the cancelling of all existing indentures—

The districts in which it prevails, are South Staffordshire, Yorkshire, Lancashire, and West Scotland. In South Staffordshire, the boys are bound by wholesale from the Union workhouses. "Many of the colliers," says the Sub-Commissioner, "take two or three at a time, supporting themselves and families out of their labour. As soon as either of them is old enough he is made a getter, and is then worth from 10s. to 15s. a week. At the age of fourteen, the apprentice works side by side with other lads who are getting 14s. a week, he himself getting nothing; at seventeen or eighteen side by side with freemen, who may go wherever they please, and are earning 20s. or 25s." "The orphan," says the Sub-Commissioner, "whom necessity has driven into a workhouse, is made to labour in the mines till the age of twenty-one, solely for the benefit of another." Notwithstanding this long apprenticeship," says Dr. Mitchell, "there is nothing whatever in the coal-mine to learn beyond a little dexterity, readily acquired by short practice: even in the mines of Cornwall, where much skill and judgment are required, there are no apprentices." Being paupers and friendless, the masters are careless to what dangers they expose them, and treat them with the utmost brutality. Lord Ashley read the case of a boy in West Yorkshire, whose master had struck him with a pick, which passed through the glutæi muscles almost to the hip-joint: the same boy had twenty other wounds, occasioned by dragging coal in low workings. But of the cases read, the following is the worst: it is related in the report of Mr. Kennedy. "Edmund Kirshaw," says the Sub-Commissioner, "was apprenticed by the overseers of Castleton to a collier, near Rooley Moor. Mr. Milner, the surgeon, examined this boy, and found on his body from twenty-four to twenty-six wounds. His posteriors and loins were beaten to a jelly; his head, which was almost cleared of hair on the scalp, had the marks of many old wounds; one of the bones in one arm was broken below the elbow, and seemed to have been so for some time. The boy, on being brought before the Magistrate, was unable to sit or stand, and was placed on the floor in the office. It appears that the boy's arm had been broken by a blow with an iron rail, and the fracture had never been set, and that he had been kept at work for several weeks with his arm in that condition. It was admitted"—what an admission!—"by the master, that he had been in the habit of beating the boy with a flat piece of wood, in which a nail was driven and projected about half an inch. The blows had been inflicted with such violence that they had penetrated the skin, and caused the wounds described by Mr. Milner. The boy had been starved for want of food, and his body presented all the marks of emaciation. This brutal master had kept him at work as a waggoner until he was no longer of any use, and then sent him home in a cart to his mother, who was a poor widow residing in Rochdale."

YOUNG PHENOMENON

PERFORMANCES.

At Winold fair for four successive years Old Phenomenon trotted a mile in two minutes and forty-six seconds. In the year 1839, Old Phenomenon beat Mr. Wigg's Norfolk Hero, in a match of one mile for five hundred guineas, and then challenged all England to trot the same distance for 1000 guineas, which challenge was accepted by Young Phenomenon. This match came off at Denham Market, the first Friday in July, 1840, Young Phenomenon beating his sire by thirteen seconds, thus proving himself the champion of England. Young Phenomenon performed this match, in two minutes and thirty-two seconds.

Young Phenomenon travelled two seasons in Norfolk, the following circuit, Watton, Saham, East Denham, Pickenham, Swaffham, Mundford, Bodney, Stanford, Ashill, and home to Ovington.

The proprietor will not praise his horse for substance, bone, and action, in an advertisement, but requests the gentlemen of the above neighbourhood to inspect him, and form their own judgment.

Terms for one mare £3; three or more mares belonging to the same proprietor £1 10s. Groomage, 5s. each mare. Good Paddocks will be provided, and every attention paid, but no risk will be incurred. Due notice will be given when mares are stinted, and if not removed within one week, 2s. 6d. per head will be charged per week, for keep.

All payments to be made before the mares are removed. 3268
